

THE BIRTH OF CREATIVITY
STANLEY DAVID GEDZELMAN
07 Feb 2014, 10 OCT 2020

In one week it will be Valentine's Day, the day of love! When you are satisfied in love that is where your energy will pour. You will create life. When love is forestalled or denied, you need another outlet. That is where creativity is born.

Ten to one or even more, nerds are men over women. All but two or three of the weather nuts I have encountered have been men. In the poker halls, men are ten to one or more over women. Ten to one or even more, when someone addresses you in terms of an all-encompassing interest or obsession, it is men. Everything in the universe is filtered through the lens of their subject. The human is drained out. Sex is gone.

Genetically, it seems that the diversity of men is something like half that of women. For every successful, woman-gathering man there had to be several failures or rejects. What were all those reject men to do? Find a replacement for sex and love – an all-consuming interest.

Women always look for providers. Originally it was Esau. But as the nerds created a more complex and refined world, brute strength gave way to inventiveness and subtlety. Jacob stole Esau's birthright. The nerds became better and perhaps even the best providers. The inventors and makers of spears survived the wielders of spears.

The nerd has triumphed and bedded the woman. Well, sometimes that is. Remaining a nerd too long has its disadvantages. Sometimes the nerd keeps bragging about his discoveries so long that when the woman is ready he is not. That will force the nerd to make another discovery!